Curator Statement:

“If you see something that moves you, and then snap it, you keep a moment.”
Linda McCartney

Photography is a powerful medium with the unique ability to capture a single moment in time and preserve it for eternity. It can freeze time, allowing us to relive a moment and experience it repeatedly. This ability to capture a moment that cannot be reproduced makes photography a distinctive art form.

Through the lens of the artist camera, John Moyers, captures the essence of a moment, whether it is the beauty of nature, the joy of a celebration, or the mundane moments of everyday life. Each of John's photographs tells a story, and the emotion captured within it can be experienced for years.

In this exhibit, Moments in time: Point and Click, Moyers celebrates the power of photography and its ability to capture moments that cannot be reproduced. The images on display will take you on a journey through time and space, showcasing the unique perspectives, visions, and moments of Moyers view of the world behind the lens.

From breathtaking landscapes to intimate portraits, each photograph in this exhibit captures a moment that will never be repeated. They are a testament to the camera's power, the photographer's skill, and the fleeting beauty of life itself.

and his unique ability to capture the beauty and complexity of the world.

Artist Statement:

After retirement I had more time to be outdoors exploring the natural world. I bought my first camera and began taking pictures. After a while, I learned the potential for good images was all around me. It also became clear to me that to make good photographs one must pay attention to surroundings, have patience, understand lighting and composition, be cognizant of the background, and study and plan beforehand. My photographs are a way to share experiences in ways I'm unable to put into words.
